...the durability of cultures require that there be space for figures whose function is to uncover and disrupt the very things that cultures are based on.

-- Lewis Hyde, Trickster Makes This World: Mischief, Myth, and Art

The mythical trickster crosses boundaries and breaks the rules by using humor and subterfuge. In our culture, artists like The Yes Men, Steve Lambert, Not an Alternative, and Leopold Masterson are our current contemporary tricksters extraordinaire, pursuing social change with any useful tools that are available to them. After Occupy Wall Street was cleared away and half-forgotten, after WikiLeaks and Edward Snowden, after Citizens United and the Koch brothers, global warming and the BP oil spill, Ferguson and Baltimore, few artists are under the illusion that the truth will influence change. So why not try mischief and lies? Why not have a little fun with it along the way? And why not plant the seed of possibility by simply announcing a desirable truth through a very convincing promotion?

The banners for ProVide Marketplace (pictured in this book) that appeared on the abandoned and neglected historic Arcade in Providence, Rhode Island in 2011, along with press releases, Facebook and Twitter accounts, food samplings, and brochures, caused a real buzz in the local media. When it was revealed that the amazingly slick and convincing promotion was a hoax, there was anger from City Hall to academe. But why were people so angry? Didn't the tricksters accomplish their disruptive job? Is it possible that the prank pushed the developer to speed up the revival of the building? Was it a coincidence that the developer responded to the prank by saying that the building improvements, stalled for years, would begin "within six months?" Was it a coincidence that the banners for the real opening of the Arcade, pushed into the limelight and then fast-tracked, looked shockingly similar to the fake ones?

The term “culture jamming” was coined in the mid 1980s but the roots of the concept can be traced to the French Lettrists and Situationists thirty years earlier. In America in the ‘80s the Guerrilla Girls’ posters and actions challenged the art world with their witty feminist facts while Gran Fury launched their poster campaigns about the AIDS crisis with lines like “Read my lips” on a poster of same-sex couples kissing in a parody of George H.W. Bush’s slogan. In the ‘90s, the Barbie Liberation Front swapped the voice boxes of GI Joe and Barbie and shop-dropped them back into stores, and game-designer Jacques Servin slipped some kissing male swimmers into the popular video game SimCopter. In 2009, a group of artists including the Yes Men and Steve Lambert created the “fake New York Times;” it was distributed to unsuspecting New Yorkers with the banner headline, “Iraq War Ends.” The spirit of this headline was, in fact, something of a tradition: Singer Phil Ochs organized “The War is Over” rally in 1967 to protest the Vietnam War, and John Lennon and Yoko Ono erected a billboard with the words “War is Over! If You Want It” in ‘68.

Leopold Masterson works within this tradition but pushes it into edgy new realms. He is an actor, media manipulator, graphic designer, artist, and seducer; he uses all and every material to play with our expectations and our biases. In his brilliant promotion for “Homosexual Friendly Sundays” he puts the words he wants to hear into the mouths of the people he wants to say them and lets the chips fall where they may. By co-opting graphic styles that speak to particular audiences, he makes campaigns that are remarkably convincing such as his hilarious billboard in Brooklyn for a medical marijuana dispensary. He stirs controversy by using both mainstream and social media to create these convincing campaigns, even acting as a bystander in televised “man on the street” interviews. Yet he rarely claims authorship of these campaigns (except in this book) making the media scramble for someone to pin them on.

In this book you are holding, fearless mischief, manic sunniness, and totally incautious optimism suffuse the work. Enjoy observing one of the only avenues of change we may have left to us, and seeing someone crazy-bold enough to attempt it.

Gertrude Statement:

Dear _____,

I am new to Atlanta from New Jersey for a corporate job. I first saw the attached advertisement for The Real Housewives of Atlanta this morning at Lenox Square Mall on a wall. When I was out running errands later in the day at North Point Mall I came across a ton more of these offensive advertisements that are produced by a major television network riffing on the Black Lives Matter movement. Who does Bravo think they are to put up such racially insensitive materials!? Major corporations do not have the right to do say these types of things! This is what is continuing to oppress the masses!

I tore down one of the posters I found because it was not well attached to the wall. You can see the images from my camera.

Thank you
Gertrude

Bravo Denies Making Offensive Real Housewives of Atlanta Ads Seen in Atlanta

Wetpaint - Jan 21, 2015

The email reads contains what they call photographic proof, and states:

from: jamal jones
to: StraightFromTheA
date: Wed, Jan 21, 2015
at 3:16 PM
subject: RHOA posters

To whom it may concern,

We would like to start by apologizing for our involvement in the Black

Wives Matter Bravo TV Real Housewives of Atlanta posters. This was never supposed to happen the way it did. We are part of a design team from Chicago that also works out of New York City. We were hired by who we believe was a representative of Ms. Kenya Moore in early December to design and print these posters.

We are deeply sorry for propagating social injustice and pain in America. We are coming out about this because it has conflicted with our morals as a multi-racial design team. Major corporations and celebrities continue to exploit our culture for economic gain and as designers need to begin to stand our ground.

Unfortunately through the Atlanta team's manipulation techniques they are attempting to gain recognition through controversy and we feel this is immoral. This must stop NOW. Bravo and their affiliates must be held accountable because they continue to promote bad role models and distract our culture of the critical issues facing our country.

To prove it was us we attached the original .PSD file with all the separate image layers. The posters were sent early Jan to a PO box in Atlanta. We do not know who put them up or where but we sent 50 total. We are trying to stop the rest from being put up. We are deeply sorry to anyone this hurt or angered. Again, we cannot apologize enough for allowing this period of cultural havoc to break down our already fragile society.

Sincerely,
Jamal J, Shannon G and Seoyeon M

How Kandi get to be as tall as Nene? and Porsha is slimmer than Phaedra??
 I DON T THINK SOOOO!! *****

leolady2273

Claudia is not married, Porsha is no longer married, Phaedra is ending her marriage (so we think), Kenya does not have a man (and at the rate she is going she never will). Demetria is not married (supposedly dating), Kandi has a husband (but for how long), Cynthia has a husband (that is buying buildings with her money talking about opening ANOTHER club) and Nene is married to her hen-pecked (houseman) husband. For the title of the show to be REAL HOUSEWIVES (no matter the location) all of these women should be MARRIED (at least that is MY opinion). What I find offensive is that these "ads" include women who are clearly not REAL HOUSEWIVES. They just "play one on television".

Many people suspect that the entire thing is propaganda to raise awareness for some groups personal agenda. Sort of have to agree at this point as nothing else makes sense. Kenya would be a good target as she is currently trending big time with being on RHOA, CA and the constant Kenya/Brandi controversy. I'm not a Kenya fan, but I can't see her committing career suicide by doing something like this. Bravo also has no reason to do it as their shows are already in the top spots and if it is proven they are behind it that would also have a negative effect on the franchise.

nervewellie2174

I do not know what the outrage is all about it. There are black women who want to be married. There are growing numbers of black men who are choosing to marry outside the race. Mind you, I have no problem with interracial love. But, growing numbers of black men refuse to even consider black women as wives. I think these posters are trying to alert us to the fact that there are too many black women unmarried. This is a sign of dysfunction. How can the black community survive without black marriages. The decay that we are seeing in the black community will continue as long as we see large numbers of unmarried black women raising families.

Annette

I think you're reading a tad too much into this lol. If you google, "Bravehousewivesatlanta" you'll find an instagram page from a RHOA super fan. He/she/they create funny memes w/ screen shots and quotes from each episode. This person was just trying to be funny. I respect your opinion about the subject but this right here is probably not a serious social comment about the alarming number of unmarried black women, etc. Just a play on words from the popular 'Black Lives Matter' in a very poor attempt to be funny and promote their fave show.

If this was an outside job, I don't understand what these ads were meant to achieve.

Anyone?

El Comelon

Encouragement for Black women/people to marry or encouragement for Black marriages? Either way, it's tacky and it totally comes across as patronizing.

Again, whoever made the ad should know some of the women are NOT married and are NOT wives.

HarleyB

This has nothing to do with marital status and everything to do with mocking a cultural mantra.

meinnyc

And it's Supposed to be a Joke, a bad one, but a Joke nonetheless....it's was meant to Riff on the Seriousness of the thing it's referencing...

This is being taken Way 2 seriously by some...lol

I do get it....I know it's a joke and I don't take it seriously....and I didn't laugh...except to chuckle at the thought of all the uproar that would ensue.

I just can't believe the number of people that don't understand why it would...or pretend like they don't know. Oh well.

TheArtistFormerlyKnownAsYoya

If so, the person who made these just showed how ignorant they are (we already figured that out though) by using these ladies as half of them are NOT married, as you said!

Brooklyn Taunted By Ads For Pot Dispensary "Coming Soon"

The banner hanging at the corner of Nostrand Avenue and Herkimer Street (via)

We've received several tips about flyers in Bed-Stuy and Crown Heights for "The Brooklyn Medical Marijuana Dispensary." A banner hung at the intersection of Nostrand Avenue and Herkimer Street notes that a medical marijuana dispensary called "Piazza Del Popolare" is "Coming Soon" to that lot, its combination of bat clip art and the imprimatur of the official NYC government logo lending it a whiff of legitimacy. As does the gradual progression of a medical marijuana bill in Albany. Don't buy it—it's just an extremely deep and pointless trolling.

Let's assume New York has passed the medical marijuana law and the Health Department has created the necessary framework to license dispensaries (they haven't). Derek Bestreicher, the real estate agent for Marcus & Millichap, says that only one of the four lots on that parcel is in contract, sold last year to a developer. "I don't know what this guy is thinking, but they're going to build an apartment building there."

"This guy," according to Piazza Del Popolare's website, is the manager, "Tim Jenkins."

Tim's website, a crude approximation of a Tim & Eric gag, pitches Piazza Del Popolare as "an innovative cultural redevelopment," combining a medical marijuana dispensary with a casino and a brothel. It's supposed to open on May 5, 2017.

On the site's main page there are multiple references to EBT, Medicare, and Medicaid, along with what appears to be a 10th grader's idea of social commentary:

Why this progressive trio of shops you ask? Cultural anthropologists and leading scientists have found that the legalization of contemporaneously outlawed pleasures, such as marijuana and prostitution, decreases crime rates in their respective communities by up to 50%! (Ingram DD, Franco SJ. NCHS. National Center for Health. 2012.) It also improves the overall quality of life and causes extreme economic prosperity. Examples include contemporary Denver, ancient Rome, and next - Brooklyn, NY. Isn't that amazing!

Dig deeper into the website and promises that Stephen Colbert will perform at the casino designed by Frank Gehry reveal a Tired Troll—the Bushwick Economic Development Corp. exists, but the Brooklyn Cultural Redevelopment Association does not.

Emails to the site's main address bounce back with this message: "Thank you for contacting Piazza Del Popolare! Due to high traffic volume we will reply to inquiries within 1-3 business day! Sincerely."

"Tim Jenkins" doesn't answer his email either, but he has a Facebook page that he created on May 5th of this year. Tim posted a link to his Piazza on Community Board 17's Facebook page. As curated as Tim's Facebook page is (he likes Nirvana and Nas and Pitbull, he's in the Cosplayer Nation group), Tim appears to have stolen his image from a designer named Matt.

There's even a "backlash."

A tipster writes: "Some ladies came up to me and handed me this flier about a "parlor" opening in Crown Heights and that I need to pray for my sins? I keep seeing these protest signs all over my neighborhood and have no idea what is going on."

In other words, someone has papered the neighborhood with flyers and paid to hang up a banner and started a website and created a false Facebook page and a YouTube account, passed out flyers so they can make some vaguely racist joke about... gentrification? Libertarianism? Societal ills? Who cares. We've seen this kiddie pool before. Bed-Stuy is not getting a medical marijuana dispensary.

Is it too much to ask that if you're going to whip out the bible in your ridiculous hysterics, you at least spell 'Gomorrah' correctly?

Wait I thought it was Gamera.

Rodan and Gamera. Right?

I really hope this isn't going to start some trolling in the streets thing... people will take it too far in a lame kind of way. Leave it to the professionals like Patton Oswalt, even he keeps it on twitter. The picture of the douchebag/creepy white dude eyeing a sister did make me laugh, did he slip something in the champagne? who knows...

Brooklyn Medical Marijuana Dispensary

At The Brooklyn Medical Marijuana Dispensary, we are committed to being the first and highest quality medical marijuana dispensary for the Brooklyn patient in need. The healing atmosphere in our dispensary represents what we believe answers the needs that New York voters were missing in the medical marijuana industry. We strive to help empower patients with the quality of life they deserve through compassion, professionalism, and services beyond just the typical dispensary.

Our Mission:

- To be the best at understanding and facilitating the needs of our patients, making sure they have the most enjoyable and comfortable experiences with medical marijuana
- To respect and honor the laws about medical marijuana set forth by the great state of New York under Governor Andrew Cuomo's progressive decriminalization of medical marijuana laws.
- To create and maintain an atmosphere in our dispensary based on professionalism, compassion, security, and privacy
- To provide the widest variety of the highest grade medical marijuana for our patients at our dispensary.
- To set the highest standard for customer service in the medical marijuana industry
- To help keep our local community safe, clean, and peaceful
- To help eliminate negative stigmas attached to medical marijuana, dispensaries and patients in need

Pending legislation in Albany could bring medicinal marijuana to the Empire State.

The Giant "Coming Soon" banners promise weed homegrown in Brooklyn — all for sale in the borough's first dispensary.

Its website dangles the prospect of a new cultural center, where a glitzy casino and Brooklyn's first "legal and safe" brothel will share space with the marijuana dispensary.

And it's all set to open a few years from now — on May 5, 2017 — near the corner of Nostrand Ave. and Herkimer St.

Clearly the "Piazza" and the 8-foot banner announcing the plan is a hoax — but it still hit a nerve Wednesday in Bedford-Stuyvesant, where the banner was a popular topic.

"I just moved in around the corner, and I was wondering what they were doing on this lot," vocalist Harry Einhorn, 27 told the Daily News. "Then I saw this. If it's real, I've got a deadline of May 2017 to move out."

Irene Taylor, 55, liked the idea of casino — and thought it might actually be plausible for the neighborhood.

"I'll probably be their first customer," she joked.

Medical marijuana and prostitution are illegal in the city, but new legislation pending in Albany could make New York the 22nd state to legalize pot as medicine. A Siena College poll released in April found 51 percent of New York voters support the widespread legalization of medical marijuana.

So-called sponsors including the Rockefeller Foundation and Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation and Bloomberg quickly backed away from the hoax, saying they had no involvement with it.

"Our attorneys have asked for our logo to be removed from all materials," Neill Coleman, a spokesman for The Rockefeller Foundation told The News.

Building owner: Iowa pot dispensary poster is hoax

Amy Kent/Clinton Herald

CEDAR RAPIDS — The owner of a building in Cedar Rapids where posters appeared promoting the opening of a marijuana dispensary says the advertisement is a hoax.

John Wasta says two posters appeared Tuesday on the outside of his empty storefront that implied a business known as the Iowa Marijuana Company would open in October 2015. They included an image of ears of corn in the shape of a marijuana leaf.

A similar poster also appeared on North Fourth Street, next to Hook's Pub, in Clinton.

According to the website www.iowamarijuanacompany.com, Tim Jenkins was listed as the manager of Iowa Marijuana Company.

Attempts to reach him were unsuccessful, as were attempts to reach the building's owner.

Wasta said he took down the posters and is not taking the apparent prank too seriously.

The website also promoted that a store would open in Iowa City. The website appears to sell merchandise and list pricing.

Any attempts to sell marijuana would be illegal, but Clinton County Attorney Mike Wolf said hanging the posters isn't breaking the law.

Iowa City pot business posters, website a hoax

Sorry to harsh your mellow, local marijuana enthusiasts, but a sign posted on the side of an Iowa City storefront announcing the opening of a pot dispensary appears to be just a case of hoaxsters blowing smoke.

A poster was taped on a building at the corner of South Gilbert and East Court streets earlier this week for supposed business called the Iowa Marijuana Company, opening in Oct. 1, 2015, at 401 S. Gilbert St.

The poster, which prompted a couple of confused emails to the Press-Citizen from readers, included the address of a website, IowaMarijuanaCompany.com, which claimed the business would be the first marijuana dispensary in the state of Iowa.

The website says that the business also will have locations in Clinton and Cedar Rapids, and included photos of storefronts in each city with a company logo — a marijuana leaf made of ears of corn — digitally doctored into the windows. Similar posters cropped up this week in the other two cities, as well.

The website includes an elaborate menu of supposed products, from an ounce of "Preston Purple Kush" for $288.97, to an eighth of an ounce of "Alien Dawg" for $33.03.

The problem, of course, is that recreational marijuana use remains illegal in Iowa, and only this year did the state legislature pass a narrow law allowing for medical marijuana use in very specific circumstances.

The building owner of 401 S. Gilbert St., Prestino Properties, said there are obviously

Mad Mamas Entrance

I don't recall if the paper cutout figure over the door ever had a head or not, but in any case, it's a little girl holding an iPhone like a handgun.

Here is the facade of the building. In case you're wondering, the paper figures plastered to the wall are Osama Bin Laden giving Honey Boo-Boo a piggy back ride, whilst she's holding a molotov cocktail. Yeah, the guys have a quirky sense of humor.

Mad Mamas

Filling the Bucket

by R. J. Ratlungs

Content.

Content is an obscene word. It's a word that came crawling out of silicon valley in the late nineties, coined because the nerds from your high school computer class had just invented the worlds largest bucket. And that bucket was empty. And that bucket needed to be filled.

That bucket needed content.

That bucket needed art, that bucket needed music, that bucket needed opinions, that bucket needed porn.

Porn, porn, porn.

And the money started to pour in. And, lo and behold, the computer nerds became rich, the computer nerds became famous and, suddenly, the computer nerds, who only a short while ago, were being beaten to a bloody pulp in the school toilet, were being praised.

“You’re a nerd? Cool”.

How the fuck did that happen?

Money.

Money can make a pig into a prom queen.

Because that’s what it’s about.

The money has always been there, of course. The church needed to create awe in the congregation, so they wanted giant houses of worship, they wanted to fill those giant houses of worship with really impressive pictures. Pictures of God almighty in all his glory.

And so they hired us. The builders, the artists, the creators.
“Here’s money, make God look awesome as FUCK!”
And so we made God look awesome as fuck.
Of course, then the politicians and businessmen saw us making
God look awesome as fuck and they wanted us to make them look awesome as fuck, too. “Make my skin glow like rivers of gold flow through my veins!”
So we took their money.
And we made them look awesome as fuck.
For we are the propaganda of wealth.
We are the collaborators.
And, of course, this is nothing new.
Artists have always told stories about how they whored themselves out. It’s part of our tradition to talk about how Hollywood corrupted Faulkner and Clifford Odets. It’s our tradition to tell tales of money’s great rotted finger leaving slime on everything it touches.
And so we tell the tales of how the money was too just too fucking good and of how the artist took it and wrote and drank to forget what they wrote.
To forget they’d just dressed up the muse for a porn shoot. A Bukake jam fest of spoo.
We tell tales of them drinking and taking pills and pounding nails into their foreheads because,
“Jesus Fuck! Am I really writing this shit?”
This is nothing new. We all know this. These are the campfire tales of our people. The corruption that is making art for rich fuckers.

But, here's the thing: We have always, always, always bitten the hand that fed us. Michaelangelo wrote nasty sonnets about the Pope. I'm sure Jan Van Eyck drew pictures of Jesus with a hard on.

With Judas sucking it.

Why? Because rich fuckers have money and, even though the money is good, the tune the piper is calling goes something like this:

"Fuck you arty fucker, sell me your soul and I'll sell it to rubes and, while we're at it, eat the shit out of my ass. Get in there! Yeah, use that little tongue and dig for the chunks".

So none of us is surprised that, in our off hours, after our day job of making God look awesome as fuck, we repair to our lairs and draw pictures of said rich fucker with a monster cock shoved up his ass? Of said rich fucker eating piles of shit while mastiffs fuck him with razor coated dildos. Oh sure, we can paint pictures for the priests that say,

"LOOK OUR CHURCH IS BIGGER AND BADDER THAN YOUR CHURCH BECAUSE LOOK AT OUR FUCKING HUGE PAINTING OF JESUS! ISN'T HE FUCKING COOL!"

But that doesn't mean we can't paint our own giant painting of Jesus but, in the tradition of Jan Van Eyck, we paint him with a massive hard on. Jesus with a giant, Times Square size, glowing, neon red hard on that blinds the tourists with its shining glory.

With Judas sucking it.

Sucking it till his eyes are popping out of his head.

But giant pictures of Judas sucking the penis of Jesus tend to get us into trouble. And so we use a pseudonym.

Here's my giant portrait of Judas sucking the dick of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and, lo and behold, my name is Dave Titmonkey.

My name is Anthony Softpipe.

My name is Sally Mae Fartdoodle

There is a deep joy that hits you the first time you use a pseudonym. I'm writing this under a pseudonym. I'm slipping you a note in class but you don't see me do it. You open the note and it's a picture of the teacher. The teacher with a hard on.

Being sucked off by the principal.

Who has ten rats shoved up his ass.

I am nothing. I do not exist. Google me and I'm not there.

My name is Eileen Snatchpickle.

My name is PJ. Anyfucker.

My name is Robert J. Ballsuck.

And the only trace of me is a giant painting of Jesus with a hard on, with Judas sucking it, that I've hung up in Times Square when nobody was looking. I snuck in and hung it when everybody was watching the football game. And then I stood off to the side, waiting for people to come out of the bars, to come out of their homes, to come out onto the streets to see my giant portrait of God getting a hummer. And I stand there watching as people look up, see the painting and begin to bleed from their eyes.

Bleed with the force of a fire hose.

Because my painting is so fucking awesome and true and real.

My name is Debbie Assmunch.

And the muse smiles. Because that's a good reason to create. And, these days, that's all I'm looking for.

Before and after a power wash...

LOGISTICS:

With artists from different disciplines and with an array of senior centers in different communities, selecting and matching artists became a key step in the process. Putting out a call-for-artists (that yielded 224 applicants), the city advanced finalists to a panel review process run by each respective arts council. Each center's director or programming director interviewed finalists, and advised the councils on preferences. Once selected, artists committed 40-60 contact hours with participating seniors and the development and implementation of a public program to showcase the produced artworks in exchange for access to working space from January to June. The diverse programs included activities based in dance, music, ceramics, drawing, painting, and photography. To culminate the project, each senior center hosted an exhibition of the work produced by the seniors and the artist during the residency.

UNEXPECTED IMPACTS:

Though it was methodically programmed, SPARC (Seniors Participating with Artists Citywide) availed itself to the serendipitous outcomes that emerge from pairing an artist with a community. By all accounts, this created overwhelmingly positive results. As DCLA reports, “senior participation in SPARC crossed language, socioeconomic, and ethnic lines, bringing together participants that would not ordinarily interact.” Some seniors took the initiative to continue working with the content of the program after the program itself ended. For example, in one Brooklyn center where artist Leopold Masterson worked with seniors to create a collection of small ceramic cups (shot glasses), the seniors were taught basic computer skills and launched a store on etsy.com to sell the cups, which generated income to repair the center’s kiln as well as funded future projects.

ProVide Marketplace | Opening May 21, 2011 in Downtown Providence

MARKETPLACE
PROVIDENCE

Coming Soon!

ProVide, the premier artisanal food and wine marketplace, is finally coming to Providence, RI. Two years after partners Giancarlo Mostaccioli and Tommy Pacheco won permission to convert the city's long-dormant Westminster Arcade — known to locals as simply The Arcade — into a large-scale grocer's, our team has paired with local farmers, artisans, administrators and institutions to transform the historic shopping center, located in the center of Downtown Providence and declared a National Historic Landmark in 1976, into Rhode Island's foremost culinary mecca.

The marketplace, located at 66 Weybosset Street, is poised to become the ultimate destination for food lovers all over the Northeast to shop, savor and explore. Its offerings include in-house farmers' markets for locally sourced meat, seafood, produce and dairy; a culinary educational center that will feature demonstrations from local chefs and food purveyors, and a discerningly curated selection of boutique eateries and confectioners. A delight for the self-styled epicure as well as the novice cook — indeed, for eaters across the board — ProVide aims to live up to its name.

Our happiness rewards program is the natural quantification of our patented multi-orthodoxy. How else would you know that the C.O.P. is working for you? Every moment you spend with the C.O.P. is progress toward greater knowledge and happiness and this is reflected in the happiness rewards points that you accumulate.

What is your religion?

The fundamental truth underlying all religion is that there is no universally understood religion. When presented with the orthoxies of established religions, it is only natural for a true individual to select only those tenets of the religion that correspond to the way that they live their lives. None of the established religions recognize this phenomenon as a positive, and inevitable progression for spiritual development. The C.O.P. is structured toward helping you to customize your religious development with our patented multi-orthodoxy.

You can learn how with our invaluable text, The Church of Psychology Volume I.

CHURCH OF PSYCHOLOGY

Do you think about religion? Then you are already a member of the Church of Psychology. The typical religious experience is one of constant questioning, especially when it comes to knowing how much religion one should have in their life.

Should you really settle for just one of anything in life? It is only natural that one would feel unsatisfied. Our patented multi-orthodoxy will be a perfect fit for your inquisitive mind. We accept all people and all major credit cards.
